Dancing with Bears: Israel's Romance with Russia - Causes and Prospects

Guest Lecturer

PINCHAS LANDAU

8.00pm Monday 15 October

Pinchas Landau was born in London and educated at the London School of Economics. He has been living in Israel since 1976 and is an economic and financial analyst, serving as a consultant to major financial institutions in Israel and abroad on domestic and global developments. After working in banking and investment, he moved to journalism in 1983 and served as financial correspondent of The Jerusalem Post and then as senior columnist for Globes, Israel's business daily. He has written for many international newspapers, including the Wall Street Journal and Barrons, as well as numerous professional publications. Since 1996, Pinchas has been writing and publishing The Landau Report, which analyses economic, business and financial trends in Israel, as well as tracking Israeli and regional geo-political affairs. As there is now a strong rapport between Israel and Russia (and between Netanyahu and Putin) the following questions may be asked:

*Is Russia now stepping into the vacuum created by the withdrawal of US dominance in the Middle East?

*What does Russia want? Why is Israel its natural partner?

*How does the anti-Russia mania in the US and UK impact the Middle East and Israel?

*Can Israel remain an ally of the US whilst maintaining close ties with Russia?

Join us for an expert fascinating insight into these issues and the outlook for the 2020s.
